

Boost for Irish Broadband

IRISH Broadband said yesterday that it has more than doubled its nationwide network after an investment of €13m in the year to date. The network has been extended to areas including Swords and Coolock in Dublin, Summerville in Waterford and Raheen in Limerick, according to the company.

It said the expansion will continue for the rest of the year and subsequently after.